

Austin Estelle represents and advises clients in all aspects of the development and construction process, from contract negotiation to risk management and project termination.

Austin focuses his practice on construction litigation, and as an experienced litigator, he regularly assists clients in navigating state and federal law in complex lawsuits. Austin has represented and advised a wide range of clients, including owners, general contractors, and subcontractors. He has a deep understanding of the litigation process, and he helps his clients achieve successful results in court and in arbitration.

In addition to his litigation practice, Austin provides counsel to corporations, companies, and partnerships in matters involving real estate law.

Austin's practical, results-driven approach enhances his ability to guide clients through complex construction challenges throughout the state.
